It's 7.20 am and it looks like we're in luck. The cigars are all still nicely moored here at Sylvan beach and all is calm on lake Oneida.

We briefly stopped at Brewerton town, on the other side of lake Oneida, but no grocery stores or laundry were anywhere near so we decided to press on.

Brewerton We will soon turn off the Oneida river/ Erie canal and onto the Oswego river/ canal. Only 8 locks to go!

At Fulton we found the grocery store and more Canadian geese-

In Oswego we found the laundry and the grocery storeand the public library with free wifi.

Oswego-The last lock!

We were lucky to have a nice calm morning to motor the 11 miles through Lake Ontario to Fair Point marina.

Tomorrow morning we're booked to have the mast re-stepped. (see page 1!)

Fair Point marina

We tried to go to Colloca's winery for Jean-Luc's birthday dinner but got thoroughly soaked through trying to walk there ...

We decided to try again on Monday for lunch, but luckily Schyler picked us up and told us they are closed lunchtime during the week. He advised us to go to the Hard Rock Cafe instead in Fair Haven village. The 'Hard Rock Cafe' turned out to be the Hardware cafe, an ex hardware store and very nice too. No wine or beer though....is this a semi dry state?

Colloca's was closed for lunch, but open for wine tasting, so wine tasting we did... the whole lot of them! Then Jean-Luc got a bottle of his favourite wine as a birthday present. His favourite?

You guessed- The Chateau! It is excellent.

We anchored for a couple of nights just off Fair Haven village, which is very pretty. A local man rowed over to say hello, he and his wife also have a yellow sailing boat. They were very impressed to see a French boat in Fair Haven, they don't see too many 'real sailors' as he called us!

His wife had sent him over with some lovely vegetables from their garden. So sweet! Thank you Sharon and Bill for being so kind and thoughtful.

The vegetables were delicious!
